

 LIM KEXIN

28, senior tax consultant at PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) & community and youth advocate

She makes juggling work and volunteerism seem effortless. With over 11 years of volunteer work with Rotaract, and grassroots and other organisations under her belt, this passionate do-gooder champions the Singapore Financial Women’s Association’s undergrad mentoring programme, drives corporate social responsibility projects for PwC, and shares ideas on how to engage youths at the National Youth Council while holding down a demanding job as a tax accountant. If that isn’t enough, she also serves on the Young PAP’s (YP) executive committee and chairs six YP branches. It’s no surprise the World Bank has recognised Singapore Management University’s first female valedictorian as one of Singapore’s emerging leaders. She says: “I feel most grounded while volunteering in the community. At the same time, influence is needed to bring about the positive changes I hope to see.”
