SINGAPORE: Singaporeans join millions around the world to observe International AIDS Candlelight Memorial Day.

The event was held at the Singapore Management University on Sunday evening.

Leaders from major religions led the prayers as Singaporeans gathered by candlelight to remember those who have died from AIDS.

Organisers hope the memorial will give people a chance to come to terms with death and AIDS.

They also want to remind Singaporeans of the need to fight discrimination against the disease.

And whether in dance or in song, everyone had their own way to express their support for those who live on with AIDS. - CNA/de