Arthur's Socio-political Art

Local exhibition opens in SMU

Newspapers around the world are increasingly focusing on the socio-political themes of today. However, some of the audience that turn up to exhibitions are not art connoisseurs or persons with sophisticated tastes. They are ordinary people, not art critics. The reason is that the art of today is not just about enjoying with the eyes, but also about understanding the social environment, understanding the current world, and understanding the relationship between the individual and society.

The solo exhibition "Arthur: Socio-political Art" is an art exhibition that opens in the School of the Arts in SMU. The exhibition, which is entitled "Arthur", is the second exhibition in SMU. The first exhibition was "Arts for Life" last year, and its success paved the way for this more comprehensive exhibition.

The exhibition features 52 works by Arthur, a well-known artist who is based in the US. The exhibition is open to the public until 17 March. The exhibition has received a good response, with a steady flow of visitors throughout the day. The exhibition is expected to attract more than 10,000 visitors in the next two weeks.
