[SINGAPORE] Some 40 students tested their knowledge of business in the qualifiers for the inaugural Singapore Press Holdings (SPH) Singapore Universities Business Quiz on Saturday.

The competition was friendly but intense as the qualifiers involved shortlisting the best teams from each university here. This involved an intra-university competition in which the teams went head-to-head with each other, answering questions on a wide spectrum of topics broadly categorised as General Knowledge, Headline News and Financial World.

The winners from each round emerged to continue in the next leg of the quiz.

This sets the stage for the semi-finals on March 7.

The National University of Singapore (NUS), Singapore Management University (SMU), the Nanyang Technological University's Nanyang Business School and SIM Global Education will each send two representative teams to that stage of the competition.

On March 14, the final, only one team from each university will still be left standing. The four finalist teams will then vie for the top prize that includes at least $6,000 in cash as well as job attachments for each of its four members.

"The quiz is a good test for all of us," said Berton Lim from NUS. "In university, we study academic subjects and can get out of touch with the world and financial happenings."

"We are looking forward to the preliminary rounds," added a team member from SMU's E.y.E Investment Club. "This is a great chance for us to broaden our knowledge while raising our profile in campus."
